

A MESSENGER.....

What is Christmas? A certain prince called Didymus (twin), the heir to his father's throne was called upon by his king to visit the kingdom disguised as a beggar and learn the mind of the citizens of the kingdom, to see what they thought of the king and his rule. The purpose of the king was twofold; in that, he would find out what changes needed to be brought in the governing of his kingdom and it was also a perfect opportunity for the son to learn more about the kingdom as he (the son) would one day take the king's place.

The obedient son does as instructed and leaves the security of his father's palace and soon finds himself becoming a part of the reality he sees around him. In his search to understand the mind of the people, he, himself becomes a beggar and forgets his own identity. His reality becomes the poverty he lives in and finds himself sleeping in dark and dank places where foul odors and dark wet floors are comforting, and where this poor soul finds his rest. Forgetting all the comforts of his father's house and his own identity, his heritage, he settles down with his life. Until.....

The father in his desire to see his son learn, experience and mature has allowed this passage of time, in which he has seen his son fall into the state of mind of a beggar. And when he sees that his son will not return until he (the son) is renewed in his mind and awakens from this nightmare that he has slept himself into, the father reaches out. He sends the other (twin), the identical twin, the one who was like and could identify with the first. To search him out, remind him of who he is, awaken him from this parallel reality and bring him back to his first estate.

We understand that, if this parable is an analogy of what we have been sharing, then many questions can be asked, however our prayer is that one refrain from any doubts and simply see the point the parable is trying to make.

We would like to state that poverty, would not be a permanent state, but would change, as all things do. And eventually the gates of the palace would enlarge and include all until the kingdom became the palace.

Remember the plan..... That in the dispensation of the fullness of times He (Father God) might gather together in one all things in Christ (anointed one, the word of salvation, the prince of peace), both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; ( the palace and the outermost parts of the kingdom) even in him. (YESHUA, GOD IS SALVATION).

Christmas is the Father (God) sending His Son (Jesus Christ) to save His Son (Adam and Eve) from the poverty of his deceived mind. The condition of his mistaken identity. Awakening him from this sleep of death and redeeming (giving his worth again), showing him who he really is.

“THE WORD”, that was in the bosom of the Father, close to his heart, always in his mind, the consummation of his creation in his image, comes forth from the Father in the likeness of sinful (missed the mark) flesh to restore that which was lost, so that the Father alone can be GLORIFIED and creation finds its glory in the father.
