

A CHAT WITH GOD...

This morning I had a little chat with God. I have always felt that God heard me when I talk to him, as if all the many answered prayers I've received in my lifetime weren't enough. 😊 As a rule, I rarely take time out to sit down and talk to God because I'm aware of the fact that he knows my every thought and desire. When I have a need, I know that God picks up on it immediately.

The answer to our every desire is given the instant it is formed in the heart. But because of our programming we many times block the answers from appearing. Anyway I walked to my car very early this morning as I always do, but this morning my desire was to just take a few minutes and have a serious talk with the one who is everywhere at once, so I did. I heard our God speak to me as I sat in my car.

As you know, God speaks through our intuition. What came to me was the realization that no one can beat Gods technology. He is technology! I'll explain... I as well as many others today, know that the secret Government, better known as the 'Global elite' or the illuminati etc. have technology that would make the average persons head swim, even the ability to time travel. They have means of knowing more about you then you yourself know about you.

They could tell you just about everything about you that's ever happened since the day you were born. If you have ever listened to David Wilcox for one, you probably have some idea of the advanced technology these people have. Yet... compared to God, they would not even equal a child playing with its tinker toys. Every single thought, every single feeling you've ever had, God has known about it. But many of us "know" these things but, I seriously wonder how many of us really have what we "know" and "agree" with...and have things "resonate" with us, that truly have their reality.

I wonder how many feel that when something resonates with them that they have it. Actually I realize this is none of my business. 😊 Its Gods business and he will take each of us on as we become ready. For over forty years I've known and taught many times on God being omnipresent. This morning this glorious fact became more a reality to me then ever before. I believe one our biggest hurdles we must surmount is our mental concept of what God is. I don't believe that even God knows how to explain what he is to himself.

And yet... what ever he pointed to that is existing would be a part of what he is...it would be a manifestation or extension of what he is, but exactly what beyond anything created is this God?? What if... at the core of everything there's an Energy field. And what if the Creator is the first projection that came from this Energy field? The Creators projection would have then been creation, just as what we project is our creation.

I would say for certain that we are all in for one wonderful ride. These are the days that the light is showing us step by step the way to ascension. And the fact that we are seeing it is proof that we are ascending. Wilcox and others tell us that the ascension began in the 80's. This would mean that we are now on the tail end of it.
