

AT THE END OF THE DAY...

Row, row, row your boat gently down the stream
Merrily, merrily, merrily, merrily life is but a dream.

Many of us have heard this old song and we've known it since we were kids. One day this song came buzzing through my head and I wondered. Did the author of this little ditty realize the significance of the lyrics? Life is one, life is God! Life is the stream of God. We can attempt to row upstream, or we can drop the oars and let the stream carry us to our destination. From my perspective here in the relative world, I have free will.

From my single eye perspective I am predestinated. My life is just like a movie reel setting on a shelf. The ending as well as the beginning is on the reel. In terms of the reel setting on the shelf, it's about that precise moment beginning from the cosmic explosion and everything that happened in between over who knows how many earth years until we all were back from the journey and once again become that which we've always been the Creator of it all, only much, much more.

According to the movie reel on the shelf the fat lady has sang and the Absolute now rests having its desires satisfied at least for this time around. If I am able to view creation from the perspective of the Creator, I see the end from the beginning. The Divine mind knows it's all over! From the I AM'S point of view, it's over; this is because that which I am dwells outside of time space reality. The Absolute is not caught in the illusion, or is it?

If the three dimensional consciousness can look at this life existence as a dream, it's easier to see that predestination and free will are both true. For example... if this is a dream, then there would be a greater me that is at present sleeping, and the experience that I'm having now, would be a dream. We know that what can seemingly take days, months or years in a dream, can actually take only seconds or minutes in waking consciousness.

So we can liken the Divine Consciousness as that which can take the movie reel from the shelf and watch it at will. I believe that the Master could shift his consciousness to view life from the lucid consciousness as well as from the dream consciousness. I believe that the many masters chose to enter into the Dream of Creation for the purpose of awakening the sleeping Adam.

Each of us, you and I, has the built-in ability to shift our consciousness so that we come into the I AM awareness. Not in doctrine or teaching, but in experience and reality. If I cannot know this experience today, I will tomorrow. Now I want to change the subject. The only thing that ever stops me from receiving my birthright is, and has always been just one single thing. That one thing is the dual mind.

Now; from reading the posts on Heart To Heart I feel that most if not all that post here are more or less believers in the gospel of Jesus Christ. I myself was in the conventional church for years. I never heard the Good news all while I was there. Paul in Timothy wrote these words... "They shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, always learning, but never coming to the knowledge of the truth." The good news in terms of the letter of scripture is that when Christ died on the cross, he died for every man; therefore every man was saved then!

Upon the Resurrection of Jesus the Christ, all of creation was raised with him. This was a mystery to me until oneness was revealed to me. I read Paul in Galatians who said "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." Under the risk of being boiled in oil, that ought to read... "Christ lives as me." Actually this has always been true, but it took the cross to reveal it, not the wooden one but the one that I create in my life due to my amnesia. The death on Calvary was the final act bringing in the new creation. The only real difference between the old creation and the new is a shift in consciousness!

The question I need to ask myself is this... "Have I made the shift?" step number one is to acknowledge that I'm a sinner. Step number two is to see exactly what a "sinner" is. A sinner is anyone who still believes he is! A sinner is one who believes that God expects him to live a certain standard of life, in other words, "I need to walk in a way that is pleasing to God." Or to put this way... a sinner is one who has not seen what Calvary accomplished.

Or... you could even say that a sinner is one who has not seen that the only reason for the cross was to dispel the illusion that I need to be saved at all.

At the end of the day, you could rightfully say that the only sin there ever was, is the belief in it!
