

---

Definition of a sinner...

Someone who has forgotten who they are and why they've come.

I sin {miss} when I say or do anything that is out of alignment with who I am, however I cannot possibly do anything that is not in the script that I as the offspring of God wrote before coming into the dream of flesh.

Who am I?

I am light which emanates from the creative energy consciousness, the Creator of all that exists. If I speak this from spirit which is the core of my being and yours I speak the truth. As memory returns it brings with it the deep realization that all that exists is perfect, in that everyone and everything is doing exactly as they are supposed to do. What constitutes sin consciousness, the root cause of all mistakes? The answer is the lie that says I'm less than what my Father created and a separate Being.

What is truth?

I am... the way, the truth, and the life!

My Father would not change anything that he has created.

If I as spirit am in control of my temple I never insist on others conforming to my standards or beliefs. I do not attempt to adjust, control, or manipulate. My desire is only to flow so all who are thirsty may drink.

My supreme desire as an enlightened ego is to dwell in the spirit of that which is my Creator and be streams in the desert and bread to the hungry. Light desires only to shine into the darkness of the human mind bringing with its total liberation with it. The mingling of God with man is my supreme goal. I am at all times present within every created thing for all issued forth out of me be it man, beast or what man thinks of as matter. All creation is my only mode of expression. With this understanding comes the dawn.

I have subjected all that I am to what the human mind sees as vanity. As mass consciousness I dream the dream of limitation. The dream is real, for I am the dream weaver. I created man for the purpose of mingling my divinity with humanity thus I began the process that will result in my hybrid. This mingling of God and man is a forever thing. My dream of humanity is that which enables the two natures to become the one new one. What man calls death is of me. First death then Resurrection, two ends of the same stick.

At the birth of Jesus, God was brought into man. At the resurrection, man was brought into God. Between these two principles the cross is always working putting to death the old, while at the same time the principle of Resurrection is birthing the new. The true resurrection of the man Jesus happened long before he was ever put on a wooden cross for He was a maverick.

His insight into a greater reality made him one. Because of his perspective on life and his opposition to the controlling religion of his day, he was feared and hated by many of his own countrymen, even those of his own household. He knew pressure from all sides. His knowledge of God made him an outcast and a rebel. This was the cross that worked death to his ego but the power of resurrection to his inner man. This is why he was known as a man of sorrows.

His story is a picture of God and man being mingled and ultimately being blended into one. This is one side of our story. There is however a higher and more accurate perspective of you and I, and it is this...

We are perfect now! Looking at things with the dual mind the ego creates a process that in reality was never necessary at all, because we were perfect at our creation as souls from the very beginning.

Man came to believe he was a sinner and separate from the Creator, and so it became his creation... this dream of separation. However, all is and always has gone according to the sovereignty of God. To see this helps to shorten the time of awakening, and yet, and yet, he works all things according to the council of his own will. For it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth but of God that showeth mercy.

All the grace and all the mercy that was required for each of us to finish this race was given before the foundation of the world. It's a done deal. All I'll ever need or require through all eternity has already been given. All is required is the faith to appropriate all that is available, and that has also been given. So let's all run together and if one happens to fall they'll be others who are running with him to help him up. There is no such thing as a mistake; there are just opportunities for learning. Forgiving is not forgetting, it is understanding.