

IT'S ONLY A DREAM...

Could it just possibly be that there is a far greater reality than what has ever entered the heart of the earthbound man, he that is known by some as the "five sense man," the man that has never tasted more than eyes can see or hands touch? He whose breath is in his nostrils? Jesus spoke of a kingdom that was not only within me, but one that was here and now. Right where I stand is this kingdom! And who is this that even now rests in heavenly places, this one that Paul spoke of?

When I arrive home at night, I open the front door and hit the light switch to turn on the lights. Before I do that, all is dark within the house. I then flick the switch and the room is flooded with light. Suppose I was to ask the question where does the darkness go? This would be a trick question, for actually the darkness doesn't go anywhere, because it's not real, but it's only the absence of the light. So darkness is the absence of light. Evil I must admit is real in this reality but this reality is a dream. When I begin to awaken I'll see no evil. In the first epistle of John he writes...

"God is light and in him is no darkness at all." I believe the problem is one of perception. The problem we have with what we perceive to be evil {darkness} is only on this level of reality. We've all had dreams in which bazaar happenings took place. Perhaps your aunt turned into a dog. Or you were flying a super sonic jet that turned into a motor scooter etc. As you all have no doubt experienced, anything can happen in a dream. I submit that I am dreaming now.

All sorts of really weird things are happening in this dream. Parts of me are always dying, some are getting sick, others are attacking each other and huge parts of me are going to war with each other. This dream that I'm having now is totally insane. Sometimes it's a nightmare, sometimes it's very pleasant, especially now that I have come to realize that it is, only a dream. In this dream we have day and night we have good and evil. Yet I do realize that evil is only the absence of good, the true good being the light of truth so I realize that evil and darkness are synonymous terms for the absence of light or truth.

I will awake in him, in just a little while. I have always been that, but in this dream I'm having, I am apart from the Absolute. It's been a nightmare, me attempting to placate a God that is far away in some heaven who is ever watching me in my folly in attempting to be like the one that I already am and always have been. Although this dream has taken billions of years in time, the time is part of the dream also, for as I awake I am beginning to realize that everything has happened already. I seem to be only semi conscious at the moment, which accounts for what little, I do realize, but it's only a little while and I will awaken fully to the dawn.

Back To Home Page

