

THE REALITY OF ILLUSIONS.....?

Am I inside the illusion or outside? The answer is both. In using words like illusion or illusionary when referring to this world, I don't mean to imply that it isn't real. My personal definition of any illusion is that it is most definitely real to the person or persons who are engaged in it. For a long time I've contemplated on the idea of one day writing a book and entitling it "GOD IS A DREAMER."

This is how I see the Absolute. We all from this illusion see God a little differently. How we see him is important to each of us, because however we see him is working for us. This includes the atheist who sees no God. How I see God at any given time in my life is working for me. Depending on how he appears to me, the results of how he appears may be obvious or totally abstract. The point here is however I see him it's working for my ultimate and his ultimate good, for we are one.

Jesus Christ's mission had more than one purpose. His main purpose was to reveal reality in terms of who I am. I know this because it's the ultimate truth and will solve the mysteries of God as I learn it. I have been told that the meaning of the Greek word translated "truth" in the bible is a word meaning reality. For example, in the first chapter of the gospel of John there is a verse that says, "The law came by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." I understand that "truth" here is a Greek word meaning reality; I've been told it also means enjoyment.

If anyone ever saw through this illusionary world it was the man Jesus of Nazareth who was fully animated by the Spirit of God. But before I go off on some tangent I'll come back to the subject of illusions. Are they real or are they not? Number one, the reality of something is determined only by my perception. I see all illusions as real. I do not experience any as my own reality necessarily {except the one I'm experiencing now} but I understand all illusions as the reality of the individual or individuals who experience them.

I see this world as a mass induced illusion, created from mass consciousness, and I believe Jesus Christ did also. I believe that any spiritual master who has reached at least the bottom rung of the Fatherhood degree of consciousness, also understood this world as a dream or an illusion of the masses. I believe they understood sin to be a miss conception and distorted perception of reality. I see the primary reason for the arrival of all the spiritual masters as an effort to open the sleeping eyes of humanity and cause it to awaken to who it is.

When I begin to awaken or to stir in the dream, it begins losing some of its reality. When I come to see a little more clearly it is then I cease from any attempt to escape it. To the ego, to come to the realization that the world it knows is not real is at best not a comforting thought. The spiritual man however is not at all stressed by this, but enjoys the dream far more. {Spirit is what I am.} This is because by this time I'm beginning to awaken to a reality that is a far greater one.

I then come slowly to the realization that since I am beginning to become lucid in this dream, I can manipulate it. By this time it's as though I'm straddling two worlds, the Dream and the greater Illusion where I know there is no limitation. When I become lucid within my dream, I then come to know that since it's all a dream I am in control. The very first thing that I then bring under control is the ego. This is a spontaneous happening as the veils are removed. The only existence that is not illusionary is the Absolute.

For the dream to become enjoyable to me, I must change the way I respond to outward stimuli. For this to be my experience I must see through the dream of mass consciousness. Ultimately I will come to know there is no outside God who has ever been in control of me. Mass consciousness that created the illusion was the perpetrator of this lie and I bought into it. I alone have throughout all eternity been the only one in control of me.

Since being thrust forth from out of Creative Energy Intelligence, I've been free to enter into and create my illusions and realms for my journey back home where I will arrive after having amassed knowledge and wisdom and riches that far surpass my human tongue to express from every single solitary experience I've ever had throughout all my many incarnations. Today I see that the numbers of souls created by the explosion are infinite and all are on a journey that will continue to enrich the absolute, {that which I also am,} as they arrive back at the Fathers house.

At this time all they have gained will be mine. All could say this. All illusions, dreams, Etc. are for experience, and there would be no "Experience" without them. The experiences result in my awakening to who I am as a soul, journeying back to the Fathers house. As I learn through all the many experiences who I am, the Absolute is learning who it is also as I. The "Father better known by some, is the Absolute, that which dwells in unapproachable light.

In a greater reality that which I am returning home to, is the one I've been all along. It is what I am now and have ever been.

My human tongue cannot name this One because it doesn't know what it's looking at when it comes into view so to express what it sees is impossible. This is the one who as far as ego {Un-renewed mind} is concerned dwells in unapproachable light. The scriptures tell me that no man shall see God and live.

Here I would define "Man" as ego, for in per portion as the as old Adam sees God it is destroyed which results in the last Adam who then surfaces. The man that cannot live before the presence of God is not real anyway but is only a creation of the dream of mass consciousness. John wrote that when I see him I will be like him. So this tells me that as revelation comes to me of God and I see him as he is, it has a transforming effect upon me. One cannot truly see him and escape expressing and reflecting him. This is what John meant when he wrote..."we shall be like him when we see him as he is".

This is a wonderful thing. The man Jesus learned this and it drove him to the mountain on different occasions for reflection. When this came home to me it generated a far greater desire to know the truth, knowing that to know the truth and to see him are one and the same. When I finally see him as he is in all his totality, I'll simply be gazing into the cosmic mirror of truth. Who then will I see but myself? Who could there possibly be besides I? If I and the Father are one, then speaking absolute truth there exists no one else but I.

I have seen very little but enough like you all that what I have seen beckons me onward. This essence of the absolute is my anchor and it's what will ultimately bring me back to a place that I've never left. The Absolute is both the one who is coming home, and that which has never left. Truth is a double edge sword. One side slays the man whose breath is in his nostrils, the other is resurrection life that raises the dead. Nothing real is subject to death. Nothing unreal exists.
