

A DIALOG BETWEEN FRIENDS...

Ron~ Much of what I have read and heard has been filled with the certainty that soon we are going to reach a 'critical mass' and all peoples will wake up and be aware of who they are. And that then we will have global peace (a golden age, and/or millennium, etc). This is wonderful to believe and contribute toward. It seems increasingly though, right now...that there are fewer who 'have a clue' in that direction. Instead, they are afraid and closed to hearing about this hope. They want to believe the media, the bible, the fear itself.

I am learning to not look back. I am not responsible for anyone else or what the rest of humanity does or doesn't do. I see this as something that has always been a major problem with the church, especially the leaders and pastors... the so called "five fold ministry". I threw out the word responsibility from my vocabulary long ago. I'm not even responsible for me. There is a higher power that is my greater identity that is the engine and the rudder of my ship.

I depend on it to get me where I desire to go, realizing that even the faith to trust the desire I experience is motivated by that power. If there were any responsibility it would be on its shoulders. It knows of no responsibility, for all it's actions stem from a spontaneous nature that is Love, and this spontaneous love's nature is such that it always does what is best for all its life forms. There is no responsibility in the spiritual. There is only spontaneity. Life/God/Spirit/Consciousness etc. is spontaneous. Creation is from spontaneous combustion from a desire to experience all of its {source} potential. I don't believe creation is a result of any purpose. Only a desire to know, to taste, to experience all that only a forgetting would make possible.

There could have been no contrast without Source inducing the sleep of forgetting. So to continue, I break the bread of life whenever I find a hungry mouth. Those who are not open will in their own time reach out for answers to this mystery of life. The leaders of the church have always fallen into the trap that says they are responsible for their flock. First of all it's not their flock. The flock belongs to that which created it and Source is more than capable of rounding up its flock when they are ready to come home.

So my steady position about God...as Love (and us, too)...seems foolish at the least, and 'caustic' at the most. I cannot hide the Light I am, and yet..there is a way that seems right to man that somehow is safe for me to travel (and by doing so..reconnect with this earth and its people).

Those who come to you will be drawn to you. When we see earth as she truly is, we'll discover that it's the heaven we've been looking for all along... That we have been blinded because we could not see the forest for the trees. There may be those who are still blind and living outside the kingdom, they will see chaos all around them, but we will see all in a different light and because of this it shall not come near to us. Our connection to earth is a spontaneous action and one that will not come as long as there is any struggle to make anything happen.

When I first read this gift from you this morning, I was annoyed (not w/ you, but with the message) because I have thought that we aim for home (heaven) and we disengage from earth (and leave it eventually)...this merging of the two was not what I thought God to be about...so it is not either earth or heaven, but both!

Heaven and earth are two states of consciousness. Everything is! Everything we will ever experience is. Gods nature is such that it creates its own reality, and this we do every second of every day 24/7. We cannot stop creating for we create by the creative power of our thoughts.

How to next reconnect myself to that lil 'self' that I thought needed to die and never be revisited and definitely not reclaimed. If this email makes little sense, please just continue to respond as you do so well from what your heart gives you to say. It always fits, even though it may take a short while for me to realize that. And when we sit in silence (for words do not surface to share) that is best for that moment. This I know.

There is a death that we experience... It's mystical, and you have experienced it to a degree or we would not be having this conversation. If I am one who searches for truth each phantom/mystical death yields a sharper perspective that can see more into the bottomless nature of infinity. In the book hinds feet on high places Grace and Glory go back down to the valley of humiliation in hopes of winning her relatives but they couldn't hear her.

I have heard that in the east, a true guru doesn't go out anywhere to find initiates. He simply sits and meditates and the seeking ones are drawn to him. This is the pure way. My Father was the greatest fisherman I've ever known. He could sit on the riverbank from sun up till sun down and never get a nibble and be perfectly content if he caught nothing. When the fish were biting however, he always caught two and three to everyone else's one. To be a good fisherman it requires patience that is rooted in faith to be content if the fish don't bite.

So, instead of 'giving up', I am 'giving in'
