

CONTRAST...

I came from a place where there is no contrast and consequently no challenges. My home is a wonderful place to rest and to decide what my next life cycle will be and the experiences I desire to have, which are mainly all the challenges that the physical life with its contrast provides. At home, there is no light or dark, no good or evil, up or down, in and out, sick or well, rich or poor, good or evil, and the list goes on. At home the second I form a desire it's granted for I am the Creator and at home there is no time nor is there anything to prevent all desires to manifest exactly when it suits me.

Actually what I'm calling home is not really my home but it is the resting place, a realm between life cycles. My real home is everywhere and nowhere. I came forth as soul when the travailing within the Absolute reached the point of shattering into trillions of fragments. I am one of those fragments, As a soul, I am a vital part of the all, and creation could never function without me. I speak not only for me, but all of you. It is inconceivable that the source we call God could ever be incomplete.

There has never been, nor will there ever be, anyone exactly like you. No one could ever take your place. Contrast...? Contrast is what keeps me evolving. Did you ever stop to think that the Creator is ever discovering new territory because of you? You are source energy appearing as flesh and blood out here on the leading edge of an expanding universe. You are providing source energy new experience and you as all that is, is benefiting by them. Life is not about any religion, it's about living, it's about meeting and experiencing the challenges that contrast provides, it's about expansion in knowledge and growing in wisdom, last but not least it's about new experiences.

I believe that we are all here because perhaps billions of years ago that which man calls God became very bored. I have no doubt that there is a better way to say it, but it gets my point out there. This that we call God, as the Absolute, dwelt in a vacuum. This is what I see, be it right or wrong. I can only share as I see things and if it works for you that's good. If it doesn't just discard it or put it on the shelf for perhaps a later time. So the vacuum caused a travailing for perhaps a longer time then our finite minds could grasp. Then came what some have referred to as the big bang when Source literally exploded into many souls.

You've come a long way baby.

We are here to experience all the experiences that physical life can give us. When one of us gains more insight into the mysteries of life we benefit everyone, because we are all joined at the hip. We are all connected because we are Source energy in all its many forms. It's the contrast we experience every day that we came here for. I once lived what to me was a very wretched experience. That part of my life lasted twenty four years. I hated every minute of it. No one could have ever convinced me there was anything good about it. Today I know that I could not express know what I know as a result.

That was contrast at its best. Contrast I think can be explained by just saying that every day we see things that we would change if we could, or I want one thing and the person I live with wants the opposite. We need the "negative" to experience the "positive." And in those experiences we evolve. Humanity is evolving and that is synonymous with awakening out of the dream. Today I see that portions of humanity are becoming lucid within the dream. The next stage after this is coming fully awake in the celestial morning. We've come a long way but we may have a long way still to go before we awake to discover we've never been away and It's all been just a dream. I believe when that day comes I'll say wow! Now that was a trip! I think I'll do it all again.
