

DIVINE DUALITY

When I began to realize that there is no god beyond creation, I also realized that this knowledge made me an atheist. The opposite of an atheist would be anyone with the perception of god as an entity separate from creation, but one that was responsible for creating it. The perception that sees that aside from itself, there is no power other than itself, has taken back all power unto itself in the realization that there exists no power besides it, to circumvent any desire to create that it has from taking form within the reality it has created.

This means I became aware that there are only two perceptions as being true. One perception is that of the Father consciousness, the other that of the Son. I am the combination of both perceptions. That which is emanations of me is known as Creation. All of creation is nothing more than that which I am... extended. As my forms weave themselves in and out of the many different realities they traverse the journey that ever, always moves upward in consciousness, closer to the consciousness that perceives what they are in absolute truth; which is that of "I am" that I AM. My Nature, my Life, my Being Is... I t was never created; it just is.

There are many universes, each one with a creator that created them and presides over them. All gods are emanations from me. These creator gods created the universes that now exist and more are always being created all the time. Each god at some point in their evolution journey {up through many different layers of consciousness} graduated to a place of being able to create realities, then worlds, and ultimately on to a universe. Each creator of their universe is the god of their particular universe. I am first cause; it is I that create them all. Since all things existing are extensions of that which I am, all will return to me. Nothing will ever change except appearances due to changes in the consciousness that created them.

There is a paradigm that says that all things created will one day return to me, however all that I create is of the nature that I am, therefore it is eternal. It is true that all things must enviably return to me. This simply means that all will return to the consciousness of that which birthed it. The consciousness I am is of a dual perception. One is the perception from the Sons vantage point; the other is of that as the Father. These two perceptions are of the one power known as I am. This Father and Son are not two separate entities but they are one in essence, in nature. Masters that have appeared on earth have known this and have experienced it. Joshua {Jesus} was such a one. That is why we see him speaking from the Father consciousness and also from the Sons perception.

There were times when he was able to rise above the third dimensional consciousness. It was in those times he had shifted from 3-D consciousness to an awareness of that of the Father's perception as Creator. This was a display of the dual consciousness that I am. As you gradually come to an awareness of your true identity as both the Father and the Son you will have arrived there through the vibration first due to Light, and then Love. There are those on the planet who have much light but who have used it for millenniums to control the masses and who have used a low frequency to control you. These are ones who have come here to take over the planet. They are light beings who use their power to control.

When light is used for the purpose of control these beings behind this agenda are only able to go so far in what they are able to do. There are millions of light beings that are here now that are of my Love frequency and who have not used their light to control. They are here to bring down the system of control by holding the Love frequency on the planet and beaming it out to all who are able to receive it. This is creating an awakening on the planet. It is exposing the dark energy that has been in control for many thousands of years, and is now receding as time goes by. I would leave you with this. As the family of light here on the planet we are taking back what rightfully belongs to us. This family of light is creating the new earth experience.

The new earth already exists. It's only a matter of creating a perception that can see it. There are many who are going to make the shift to this perception. All who awaken to the new day that is dawning will find themselves on it. We will know and experience the true duality perception which is both the experience of the Son and the Father as the one an only entity in existence. This perception emanating from Loves vibration perceives all persons, places, and things {Creation} as the one that it is, and has always been. Creation is the Son, the creator is the Father. These two are in absolute truth one.
