

PERFECT BALANCE...

The one thing in your e-mail here that interests me the most is the quotation "Underneath are the everlasting arms". That quotation reminds me of my eternal security. Not only mine, and not only the old way. but of all creation in the way that light is witnessing to us. Nothing that the energy that we are has created can ever be "lost" in any way. Everything that is, will forever be in a state of change, but all that has and is being created is real.

Nothing unreal exists and this of course includes illusions. Mary Baker Eddy was correct when she taught that nothing ever dies, it only changes form. We have come up through all forms of life, and we still and always will animate all forms. There is no other life, but that which I am to animate them. All life is one and one day we all shall fully understand these things. It is this knowledge that will create the experience of total peace on earth.

Not one of us will ever know the fullness of total peace as long as we know there is even one life form on this earth that does not also have it. At the moment I write this to you I cannot see the connection if any, to your recent e-mail except the quotation at the beginning of this e-mail of mine. Yet perhaps there will be before I'm finished. I'll continue on following where my heart is leading. This morning after reading a post on H2H to I was impressed concerning balance.

When sharing something that is being shown me, I usually share it using myself as the one having a particular experience even though I see what I'm sharing as a universal experience. It is safer to do that than saying things in a way that may be offensive to anyone who disagrees with what I say. I'll continue... this morning I was considering the fact that the new energy is working toward balance. In the past, balance has been something as man seeking the "kingdom" have sorely needed.

Someone has said, "I am not a human having a spiritual experience, I'm a spirit having a human experience." I think it would be better put to say... "I am not a human having a spiritual experience, I am Spirit having many human experiences." I see balance coming to humanity more and more. This will bring increasing experiences of the oneness that exists. As man I am in a real sense a hybrid. I am not only human strictly speaking, nor am I only divine. Again... strictly speaking.

I am a vital part of a Divine experience that is in the process of creating an all new Consciousness. This will result as I mix and mingle light and dark energy which will produce this Consciousness. I am coming into balance as the light shows me the way. Before I can experience the ability to accept the dark energy and make my peace with it, I must have insight as to its purpose in creation besides the misconception that sees it as a means of aborting Gods purpose. This is not a possibility until I can see beyond appearances to know their reality.

I am in the process of change. This “change” is one from the five sense man to that of man who knows of nothing that exists but that, which I am, the man who knows of nothing to judge and knows of nothing amiss anywhere because I fill all things and all space and all dimensions as realms are full of that which I am. This knowledge resonates at the soul level and I wait in faith and trust that I will sooner or later know this as incorporated within my ego.

It is then that all life forms of that that I am when coming within the vibrations that are omitted from me will be drawn to me. It is then that I will express perfect balance and equilibrium. It is then I will have the unconscious ability to reflect whatever I look upon. Man has always had this ability but dual vision has distorted appearances so that what he has reflected has been distorted.

It is then my vision will have been corrected and I will see nothing but more of what I am in all the different flavors called souls of me, each uniquely different in flavor. It is then that each soul having its own unique color and flavor will nourish all the others which of course will nourish me. The light that I am at my core will supply me with all I need to surface within the ego of every man, each in his time of transition from ego based consciousness to heart based consciousness. This is when there will be a perfect blend of spirit, soul, and body, a manifestation of perfect balance.
