

WHERE IS THE TRUTH...?

Forty two years ago I entered the narrow way. Just like everyone else I ran here and there searching for that which had somehow dissipated after a few months. I was always an avid reader, so besides looking for the presence of the one I'd lost in church, I took to searching the scriptures. I also read mountains of books for most of these 42 years.

The book reading has come down to almost none. The reason for this I contribute to the fact that over the years I've learned that there is only one source of information I can rest on. That is the silent word that I often discover has somehow come to me sometime when I was not paying attention. I'm reasonably sure that all who read this board have probably had this experience

It's like so many times I've gone to sleep at night and upon awakening in the morning I would suddenly realize that I had received new information in the form of revelation. Sometimes it would be that I saw something that I had been given in the past, although now I was seeing the same thing on a much deeper level. It was through these experiences I learned that truth comes on many levels.

It always comes to me on the level that is right for me according to my level of understanding at that particular time. I see this as true for all of us. It's like I may be doing any one of a dozen different things when out of the blue I become aware of seeing something on a far deeper level than before. This may be why some have referred to it as the "silent word," But again, that which I would stress here, is that truth does not come from any outside source. It never does, it never will, it cannot.

As someone has recently said to me, "You are the truth," but the "You" that I refer to here is that greater one, the You which you've tasted and for which you search. It is the same "You" that is the "You" of me, the You of You and the You of everyone on this planet. We together are the one Son Of God. God has only one Son on this planet that is made in his/her image and it is literally his/her own image. That is you, me and all of humanity. Also I'd take this opportunity to say that nothing that was or ever will be created will ever be lost.

God and the son are not two entities; God and the son are absolutely One! Not two, One! I am the only one, and I am the only thing that exists or that ever could exist. Any man could say this and that man no matter who he was would be speaking the truth. Any antichrist can say this and it would also be true of that which he truly is but it wouldn't be true of the man who was doing the talking, for the one doing the talking would be an illusion created from a mind completely void of light

He would also however be an offspring of source energy and therefore be one of us. That which I am is the source of all creation. I am the first and the last. I would speak this for all of humanity; for all are men are the extensions of source energy. Since beginning my search for truth it's been my experience that in one sense the journey is not so much about learning as it is unlearning so much of the sense knowledge that has created what is known as the "altered ego" which is that which the scriptures refer to as enmity with God/truth.

As an extension of One, ego is what I am upon entering this physical plane. If I could speak upon my being born, oh what things I could tell you, because most of memory then is still intact. Upon the opening of the eyes and the other four senses beginning to function I immediately begin to become distracted by the strange outward goings on. It is these five senses that are the creator's of the altered ego. Each time I re-emerge into source energy all the bogus information I've picked up which has been a weight to the journey, {yet a most necessary one} one falls away.

Then as I re-incarnate into the physical plane I am once again a clear, pure ego. As the senses kick in the programming begins and as I go along the ego becomes altered once again because of the five sense programming which incidentally happens as I unwittingly buy into all the many opinions of others? I do not want to stray too far from my burden tonight which is to convey as best I can that the truth we all seek we are, and the knowledge of this and the awareness of it must come from within us, it can never be found anywhere else. I believe this is the last thing we become convinced of, and until we do, we will continue to look where it is not.

I believe within is the very last place a man will look, and then only when he has perhaps spent many exhausting years listening to everyone else's version of truth, tried them all and found that for him they were only clouds without rain. Men share of their experiences and this is good and it is usually an encouragement for certain ones on certain levels of consciousness or understanding. Sharing is good for both the one who shares and he who receives. There is however a verse in scripture that the master is quoted as saying which is...
"Take heed what you hear"

Some share with the attitude that says "Here is my experience, if it works for you great, if not that's OK too." listen to this spirit for it is non controlling. All others who share conveying the feeling that if you do not agree with their version of truth then you are missing it, you'd do well then to take heed. Jesus spoke in parables not riddles. It might sound very spiritual but the one you seek is anti control and when it speaks to you it's not in any riddle or parable. Last but not least, leave all judgment behind. I am reminded that sometimes we confuse judgment with discernment.

The difference is whether my perspective is of the ego or the inner man. The ego judges, the inner man discerns. One is critical the other just an observer. The observer sees through the eyes of the One, therefore knows there is nothing to forgive. Not so with the ego. The ego needs to be right. The spiritual man knows there is no right or wrong only opportunity for learning.
